

For Release: Last Push

(Date) – Place, Installation Name – For the past nine weeks, the men and women serving in the Department of Defense overseas have been pledging funds to help people in need through the Combined Federal Campaign-Overseas (CFC-O). The campaign, managed by Global Impact, ends on 2 December. There is still time to make your pledge. The lives of tens of thousands of people in military communities, across the nation and around the world will be forever changed as a result of these contributions.

“By giving to the CFC, individuals are able to continue their service to worthy causes,” states Captain Reagan Beaton (USAF) and a 2010 campaign representative. “Whether it's medical research, saving the planet, helping out your fellow Airmen in times of need, or feeding homeless children, find something that's important to you and you can make a difference.”

With more than 2,400 charities from which to choose, contributors can find and support causes that have personal significance. Contributors also have the option to give to the overseas military community through the Family Support and Youth Program (FSYP) fund. FSYP donations are returned to overseas military installations to support quality of life programs for uniformed service members, federal civilians and their families.

Contributors can go to www.cfcoverseas.org to complete a paperless contribution via credit card, debit card or e-check. Donations can also be made via payroll allotment, cash or check on a paper Pledge Card. Start making the world a better place by visiting www.cfcoverseas.org or contact your CFC-O Unit Representative.
